It is believed that the game was invented by children who belonged to the farming families of South-East England. They would play in grass clearing or grass grazed by sheep. A matted lump of sheep's wool, or even a stone or lump of wood, would be used as ball, a stick or some other farm tool would server as the bat, and a gate or tree stump would be used for the wicket. Earliest written reference to the game was in 1598, where it was called "Creeket". In, the 17th century, it slowly became a village game and adults began to take part in it.
